Stephen Ibaraki, MVP, I. S. P., DFNPA, CNP: Receives Top 2 International Honors

In January of 2006, it will be announced that Stephen Ibaraki is amongst the first of three to be elected and awarded the international "Distinguished Fellow" recognition:

http://www.npanet.org/public/about_fellows.cfm

The Distinguished Fellow (DF) award which is the international Hall of Fame for the global networking industry, represents the highest of honours with an estimated size of more than 20 million professionals from business, industry, government, media, and education in more than 100 countries. This honour highlights an earlier award in 2002 when Stephen Ibaraki, after a worldwide search for finalists, was the inaugural recipient of the international Lifetime Career Achievement Award for Professionalism, presented at the Networld+Interop Conference Las Vegas USA, the highest of international awards for outstanding “lifetime” business/technology achievements and contributions, integrity, and professionalism in the industry.

As with his international Career Achievement Award, Stephen Ibaraki is the only international [non-US] recipient of this Distinguished Fellow honor. This special international DF honour was bestowed onto Stephen Ibaraki due to his long history of contributions:

“The Networking Industry’s International Network Professional Association (NPA) has recognized these elite professionals for special recognition as “Distinguished Fellows” due to their significant contributions to the IT industry and work as an outstanding, prominent, and distinguished professional in the networking industry sector (encompassing the internet, mobile computing, telecommunications, security, networking, business continuity/disaster recovery, interoperability, privacy/identity, ...)...They were chosen based upon an outstanding and long sustained demonstration of top-ranking technical competence, exceptional professionalism, consummate integrity, demonstrated service, significant industry contribution, and noted leadership. Fellows represent the “Hall of Fame” of the Networking Industry and Profession. Fellows are inducted into the College of Distinguished Fellows, the international Hall of Fame for the industry, and now serve as a Director on the NPA Distinguished Fellows Board, where they are strong advocates of the Networking Profession and Professionalism. They employ the DF/NPA designation after their names as a Mark of Distinction and provide a description of their unique position.”

The Fellows program is a natural extension of the industry international Awards for Professionalism, founded by the NPA in 2002 with the past cooperation and support of industry leaders including: Networld+Interop / Interop Las Vegas (largest international conference in networking, the internet, security, and communications); Network World magazine, Network Computing magazine (the largest publications in this sector); Pearson Technology Group Publishing (world’s largest publisher); Microsoft; and Novell (participated in judging for 2005). Finalists for the awards include top Distinguished Engineers and Fellows and represent the best in the industry of more than 20 million professionals worldwide. Moreover, the judging by the independent international panel represents the leaders in the industry.

Also in 2005, Stephen Ibaraki was the first professional awarded the “new and updated” CNP [Certified Network Professional] designation from the NPA which is the networking industry’s first professional designation and more than a certification.
